A Day of Technology!

The directive, the mandate, the goal:
Embed, integrate, and use technology to engage your students.

The educator questions:
How? What? Show me?

Maybe “show me” isn’t really a question, but it might just be what you really want. You want to use more technology because you know that there are tools that will help engage your learners. But you don’t have all the time necessary to search for it, find it, try it, test it, use it, evaluate it, reflect on it, and then start all over again. You need a little guidance. “Just point me in the right direction!”

Let’s do it!

Our group of educators is constantly researching, reading about, trying and evaluating the new ideas and the latest technology to help you engage students every day. As fellow educators who practice our craft daily, we know that technology is a useful tool to engage learners. We’ve chosen the best, practical options that you can use today. We’ve been working on this for you!

Come and hear our recommendations, experiences, and even share your thoughts on tools for screen/video capture (e.g. *educreations and Camtasia), publishing (e.g. yudu and createspace), improved communication (e.g. todaysmeet and edmodo), video selection and curation (e.g. Khan Academy and WhatKnow), and more, more, more!

The fact that technology is constantly changing is challenging and exhilarating. There is consistently something new that can help you meet your goals in the classroom. With our years of experience and depth of understanding of how to use technology while teaching, we will work with you and guide you to the best technology to achieve your goals.

**The tools we share are subject to change based on what new technology becomes available, what we find, try, and decide is better between now and then!*
